

I am a listener to a Christian radio station called K-Love that broadcasts on various translator FM stations in this area and around the country. K-LOVE has been a ministry that has served hundreds of thousands of people in the country. I have been informed that the FCC will introduce a new broadcast service known as Low Power FM (LPFM) which may take priority over the current translator service now available. I urge you to look at the effect this will have on the people who depend on the ministry KLOVE in their lives and their families. In the interest of free speech and freedom of religion, please maintain the status of translator stations so KLOVE may continue to broadcast.
